The cause is that as a rule insanity attacks men in a more acute form, and they eitherrecover or die sooner than women, in whom it is of a more chronic character. It is a common error to suppose that people are generally driven mad from moral causes. Of 242 male patients admitted to Colney Hatch during 1865. and the cause of whose lunacy was known, only 20 owed it to moral causes, while in 61 cases the causes were physical. In 150 cases the cause was not ascertained. Of 198 female patients admitted during the same period 31 had become insone from moral and 51, including six here- down, &c., Water laid on. There appears to be but a very small chance of recovery when the disease has become obronic. The percentage of recoveries is in inverse ratio to the duration of the muledy, and in cases of at this moment over 800 female lunation at Colney Hatch, and the medical superintendent, adding after an experience of many years in the treatment of such bases, does not think there are more than 38 of them curable. "What, then," it may be asked, "does this costly and claborate system of treatment really effect?" The answer is easily given: It not only lessens the mortality of the poor insure, but it improves and affords comfort to all of them, and renders | Mesers, H.
